Chicago Seven May Speak Despite Court Warning

He said that there simply was not enough time to make the change to any other calendar year, considering that speakers and activities have already been scheduled for next year.

"I think that President Wilkinson and many others would like to change," Dr. Thomas noted, "but we would have to bring it up before the Board of Trustees and that won't be possible until later this month."

He said that this late date would not allow enough time to make the necessary changes. Discussion will continue on whether to make a change and which system would be best.

The seven were freed on bail Saturday when a five-judge U.S. Appeals Court panel overruled a ruling by federal Judge Julius J. Hoffman, who denied bond on the grounds that they are "dangerous men" and their appeal is "frivolous."

Granting bond, the court warned that it could be revoked for inflammatory speech, citing a 1956 Supreme Court decision which states that the U.S. "has the power to restrict seditious speech directly or indirectly, because the government has the duty to prevent revolution."

Ball, however, said he did not believe the government would want to lock up the defendants again. He cited recent public protest of the prison terms handed down for contempt of court and to the sentences of five of the men on convictions of fomenting rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

"Sedition is a word that used to be defined by information crimes, but it went out years ago," Ball said.

Cougars Lose Again As Demonstrators Throw Eggs, Balloons In Albuquerque

By MIKE TWITTY
University Sports Editor

ALBUQUERQUE — Most of the sellout crowd of 14,485 people at the University Arena here Saturday night came to see a Western Athletic Conference basketball game between New Mexico and BYU.

A few, maybe about 50, came to disrupt play and embarrass.

Rumors ran rampant during the week about possible tactics of the Black Student Union at UNM. Most of the BYU players didn't know what to expect other than to definitely expect something. Some had thoughts of a full scale brawl on the playing floor because the only exits for fans are at the top of the arena and the only exit for players is a ramp at the end of the floor opposite to where the Cougars were sitting.

Heber G. Wolsey, assistant to President Wilkinson in charge of communication, spoke to the BSU in Albuquerque Friday and answered questions for them.

Despite a friendly reception for him, plans for a protest went ahead and the man even ran into the radical section and grabbed one of the protesters.

Saturday by 6 p.m. about 200 campus and city police and state troopers were available both inside and outside the gymnasium.

No signs or demonstration of any kind occurred during the game, nor did the BSU group march in and sit as had been anticipated. The dissidents did, however, assemble themselves in the northwest corner of the arena where BYU was warming up.

Color Guard Sparks Throwing

The trouble came with an ROTC color guard on the floor and the UNM band playing the national anthem. About 20 students started throwing beans, eggs and balloons filled with a mixture of diesel oil and kerosene, on the floor.

Members of the color guard were hit with debris but none were injured. As the anthem ended, the crowd began boozing and a man even ran into the radical section and grabbed one of the protesters.

The "silent majority" immediately responded by boozing and chanting "out, out, out."

Police quickly moved in among the demonstrators to prevent further disturbances. Many of the townspeople sitting in the area began pointing out students they had seen throwing objects onto the floor.

Police, unable by law to make arrests without seeing exactly who threw what, stood by in case of more trouble while janitorial crews began mopping the floor.

The beans and eggs were easily cleaned up, but the oil solution was slippery and hard to get off the floor.

Standing Ovation For BYU

At that time the Cougars returned to the floor for the start of the game and were greeted with a standing ovation from the capacity crowd.

Due to a scuffle further down the oil, which covered the north end of the floor, the team spent about 15 minutes dribbling in front of the bench before being given some time shooting at the UNM basket on the south end.

Eventually, scouning powder was spread over the north end of the floor and maintenance crews scrubbed the floor. The oil came off but the finish on half the

Student Tutors Needed; —Service Own Reward

How many times have students felt they needed extra help in a class? If our experience is typical, the answer would be "countless times."

Many students at BYU feel that if they could only get extra help they would be able to do much better in their classes.

The obvious answer is a tutor.

There are two tutoring services at BYU, neither of which is overused.

One, in A-202 of the Jesse Knight Bldg., has tutors available to students on a hire basis. These tutors have been approved by their department chairmen as qualified to assist other students in learning, though they do not necessarily have any training in teaching methods.

Many of these tutors are excellent. Some are mediocre. They vary according to the practices of the department chairmen who approve them.

The greatest drawback to this tutoring service, however, is it costs about two dollars per hour, a cost most students find prohibitive if more than one or two sessions with the tutor are needed. As a result, only about 500 students have made use of the approximately 100 tutors available through this office.

The other tutoring service is free, but it is generally less well-known and seriously understaffed. This service has existed for many years, but it has been difficult to get tutors for the many people who would like help.

The people on the tutoring committee of the Academics Office asked each of the service organizations and honorary clubs on campus to designate one person from their organization to be on the committee and help recruit tutors. There was "almost zero response."

Similar free tutoring systems have been very effective on other campuses, but as yet, few people at BYU have seemed interested in doing something for nothing. Certain groups, such as the honors Spanish students and the German Club, have set up tutoring within their own areas, but most of the rest of us are either unaware that we can help our fellow students as tutors or do not want to help.

The tutors in this program will be given training under direction of Dr. Grant Garrison, who has done a dissertation on tutoring and training tutors.

Saint Richard And The Inflationary Dragon

It is easier to be a hero in legend than in reality. David slew Goliath with a pebble. Hercules managed singlehandedly to dispatch both the Nemean lion and the Lernaean hydra. St. George took care of the evil dragon without, so far as we know, any interference from dragon-lovers or other busybodies.

President Nixon is pursuing with commendable determination his promise to slay the dragon inflation. He has stood up against an uncooperative Congress, and has just slashed an undisclosed number of billions of dollars from his 1971 budget in order to offset the tax cuts already voted by Congress and keep the budget in balance. Almost every day brings new evidence that the war against inflation is taking hold; one indicator after another has leveled off, the latest being orders for steel.

According to the script, the dragon should be writhing in agony. Instead, he seems to be prancing along as chipper as ever. Even while Mr. Nixon was slashing the budget, the labor department announced that prices spurted ahead faster in December than in October or November. The increase for the year 1969 was 5.4 per cent, the highest for any year since 1951. It is of some, but little, consolation to note that the increase for the second half-year was less than for the first half.

Obviously wages and prices cannot continue upward indefinitely while the rest of the economy, including the money supply, is leveling off. This is like a car speeding the wrong way on a one-way street; sooner or later a crash will be inevitable. Even now, some frightened conservatives are joining some liberals in calling for wage and price controls. Others are saying that since we can't seem to lick inflation, we may as well relax and enjoy it. Some liberals, like Richard N. Goodwin, whose letter appeared in yesterday's WALL STREET JOURNAL, have revived the argument that the best "antidote" to inflation is more of the very same expansionist policies which brought it in in the first place.

The trouble with these critics is that they assume the government is wrong and that its policies can't work. In fact, the government is dead right. It is taking the proper steps to fight inflation. But too few others realize it is right. Too many people have preached the gospel of the "managed economy" and of perpetual prosperity. Too many people have come to accept inflation as part of this formula. Too many labor leaders are persuading workers to expect extravagant raises instead of warning them that pay raises only lead to price increases. Too many business men and consumers are rushing to buy or to build, thus contributing to the inflation they fear.

A determined government can stop inflation despite all of this, because it is government fiscal and monetary policies that make inflation possible. The big question is whether the victims of the "inflation psychology" will learn this in time to bring a gradual adjustment in wages and prices. If they don't, the awakening could come with devastating suddenness, or, more likely, the government would have to surrender to new inflation in order to prevent a crash.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

—Letters to the Editor

SILENT MAJORITY

Thanks for the editorial in the Feb. 20 UNIVERSE.

Also, I would like to say a word for the "silent majority" at BYU. Has anyone ever considered that many of us are not involved in politics or education. There is no reason why we have to get on a soap box or develop ulcers over air pollution, civil rights, or any other issue. We have the right and the responsibility to show our concern for these problems.

Can a student body or any other group really influence the problems which currently face our society? No.

As an active concerned citizen, I feel that the community at each of us can be a significant influence for good or bad. It seems to me that a few students at BYU are determined to concern one must take some drastic physical action.

Unconscious or maybe consciously, we are trying to prove that we are like other universities. We can learn a lesson from the Indians who in a surprised over there. They used to like to make speeches and discuss of course. Have student demonstrations accomplished anything useful? Has any student action reduced any pollution or improved any environmental or civil rights that have been taken away from the student body on any campus?

I came to BYU because I wanted to contribute to my family and provide my family with the best possible opportunity for a good education. I came to the U.S. so my family would not be forced to leave our country. These things I think are important about the administration. Student government is not perfect. Yet I believe the members of the student government at the Y are the best available in the world today.

When I find an injustice or condition that I think is wrong, I go directly to the person in charge of that function and present my complaint. I can't always be convenient, but I have found it very effective.

The Church And BYU

Students Help Serve Community

By ERICK V. MYERS

Being students at BYU, we have the privilege of living in the Mecca of Mormonism. When important events take place within the Church we are often among the first to hear about them. Nevertheless, there are items of interest that take place on campus that we never hear about. It is our purpose in this column to explore some of these items each week. Here we will present a few of the more significant activities of the Church at BYU.

I shall not pass through this world but once. If therefore, I am kind and I can show or any good thing I can do, let me do it now; let me not defer it or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

A group of BYU students numbering 150 or more puts this ideal into action each week through community service.

Served as Students Organized to Serve (SOS), the group's activities range from volunteer work at the American P.E. Training Center to serving the elderly, disabled, and retarded persons, to rehabilitation and recreational work with families and children in Utah Valley. The students donate their time to various government agencies which sponsor the programs.

SOS President John Rose says that the organization is designed to provide students with an opportunity to serve the community. Adviser to the group is Eugene Gibbons of the Community Action Program Sociedad Dept.

An SOS program in which about 50 students participate is Headstart and tutoring program conducted at Franklin School in Provo. Lou Ann Bodily, the program coordinator, says that most of the children in the Headstart program come from broken homes. The children are all four-year-olds and participate in Headstart from 9 to 11 each weekday morning.

In addition to Headstart, BYU students assist teachers at Franklin School by giving individual help to pupils during free hours in the day. In the evening SOS volunteers give aid to students at Mainstream, an adult education program at Provo High School.

Freshman Randy Cobabe coordinates a swimming instruction program at the Richards P.E. Bldg. pool each Tuesday and Thursday at 10 a.m.

"The object of the program," says Randy, "is to teach emotionally disturbed and mentally retarded children to become independent in the water." The swimming instruction also aids the children in adjusting to other people.

For Baird and fellow student volunteers work in the office of Children's Services of the State Government. Their work is assisting professional counselors and social workers in rehabilitating drug addicts and alcoholics. The students work on achieving specific goals with each person.

Multi-Activity Program (MAP) is another area of service for SOS volunteers. Students in this program are assigned in groups to work with welfare families and aid them in whatever way they are able. Their activities involve taking children to campus movies, helping with household chores and becoming friends with the whole family. MAP is a part of the program.

LDSKA volunteers give special attention to the Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City. Since many of the patients are from out of town, lack the pleasure of family and friends. The try to bridge the gap with the activities with the children.

'Imaginary Invalid'

By DAVID MITCHELL
News Editor

My active love affair with the theater began when I was a mere stripling of 16—and that was many moons ago my children, believe me. My amateur theatrical "career" has consisted of participation both on stage and backstage. Coupled with this for a number of years was a weekly pilgrimage to the theater in London's West End.

The experience has developed what my friends term a "picky" attitude towards theatrical performances, wherein I tend to not only enjoy the good but also be aware of the not so good.

I present this opening resume for the purpose of emphasizing that I'd have to work really hard to be in the least bit "picky" about "The Imaginary Invalid," which opened Friday at the Pardoe Drama Theater.

The presentation of Moliere's farce must rank among the best that the BYU Drama Dept. has had to offer.

From the flourish of trumpets which announce that the doors of the theater are open, to the wacky closing scene staged by Dee Winterton, the production offers an evening of delightful theater.

The 17th century plot is simple. Argan, "The Imaginary Invalid," a chronic hypochondriac, is a pain and a rich source of income for Dr. Purgon, who, in keeping with the medical profession of the time, bases his "treatment" on enemas, purging and bleeding. To ensure the treatment which he believes he needs, Argan arranges for his elder daughter to marry Purgon's nephew, an up and coming physician. However, this arrangement is not a pleasant prospect for the daughter, Adequate, who has plans of her own involving another suitor, Cleante. An additional facet of the plot is that Argan's wife Belina is really more interested in her husband's money than in her husband.

Happy Ending

That there is a happy ending, for those who deserve it, is a foregone conclusion, but the manner in which it is achieved is fun.

Comedy is more difficult to play than drama, and farce is more difficult to play than comedy. The pace has to be just right and it has to be maintained with time out now and then for the audience to catch its breath and to be apprised of the characters' machinations.

The pace and the level of reality in this production is established with the opening scene entrance of tumblers, clowns and unicyclists. The pace is enforced by the appearance of Argan, played by Dr. Charles Metten, who has the ability to move quickly and with all due respect, applied the right thickness of "ham" both to his

It is not easy to both direct a play and perform in the principal role, but Dr. Metten has successfully achieved the "daily double" and has, with all due respects, applied the right thickness of "ham" both to his own role and to the production.

Keeps Ball Rolling

But for a few minutes, on stage for the whole play, is he who keeps the ball rolling. The audience laughs. Merton has created a laugh at and with whom we can recognize weaknesses.

His characterization beautifully aided and abetted by Melanie Dene Carter, maid-servant, Tomette, turn, bullies and coyly her master for her own choice and enjoyment.

One other cast member, Ashby, plays the Purgon's nephew. This character is more difficult to play than drama and overplayed it and Mr. Ashby maintains balance. It is a plumb of a role he makes the best and the most of it.

Singling out three roles in a large cast—including "doctors"—is in no way to deny the professional level of the other performances or an performance would be noticeable in this production.

Set Creates Atmosphere

Mention should be made of the costumes. The Drama Dept. had nothing to do with it which could take pride in the sets and costumes of its production.

"The Imaginary Invalid" exception in these two instances. The single set creates an atmosphere where one walks into the auditorium. Faculty member Karl Pfeifer designed the set, and who worked on its construction needs most of the applause when the production receives

Smile, Bake, Dance, Sew, Perform For Belle of Y Crown

Is love? The eternal smile is still unanswered, but serve as theme for the Belle of concert and dance March 10 on hand to kit it out Henry Mancini!

here is the Belle of the Y? It's hidden among 17 from the semi-final field of 160 hopefuls after a poise, talent winner in test who is a sophomore arts and crafts and culture economics from Mesa, Ariz.; and Kathie Johnston, a speech senior from Eugene, Ore.

The 17 will be narrowed to six tonight for student body vote after a talent contest, and then the semi-finalists will wait for weeks until the day to learn who among them is the Belle. Originally scheduled for this Friday, the dance must wait until March 21 in order to have popular composer Mancini perform.

"I Don't Believe It!" "It's so exciting" . . . "it's been a really great experience" . . . "I don't believe it" . . . "I just started screaming and jumping up and down." That's what all the girls say about suddenly being so close to the Belle crown—and that's what most prospective Belles have been saying the past 21 years.

The annual diether of tears and screams all started when somebody rang the Y Belle a little too hard after a basketball game in 1949 and cracked it. In spite of the damage, the bell still retains its ringing quality, and after repeated school decided to erect a shrine where it could permanently reside and be rung.

Fund-raising continued for 10 years; there were variety shows and benefit concerts and a 1953 campaign changed students 50 cents apiece to ring the bell. But the only project that survived long after the bell was hung from its new perch was the Belle of the Y contest.

Legend recorded if the Belle of the Y ever was to be tagged things, but she came from happier things. The 1958 Belle was a Miss Nevada, but she claimed that her YU title was "a bigger honor to me than any other contest which I have been in." In 1961, not one, but two Miss Idahoans were among the top three winners in the contest.

Present Belle-hopefuls have not come from quite such heights; they are surprised to be where they are. "You just know the next day you're not going to be here," Becky Rasmussen said wondrously as she entered her turn in the talent contest.

"It's made me more aware of the things which I need to be exposed," said Sharon Crapo, waiting during the culture contest. "You meet so many people," said Elizabeth Willes, as she mentioned that she was from Mesa, "I'm from Tempe," piped up Becky Rasmussen, leaning across a row of waiting girls. "Hey, I'm from Scottsdale." And the discussion turned to Arizona Deserts, dispelling some of the nervous air.

But, Complaints
But there are complaints. In 1965, one of the six finalists vowed that "when this is over, I'm going to sleep for years." It echoed in 1970 from the waiting 17. "I'm dead tired," sighed an exhausted Sharon Jones. "Have you ever tried to do homework in a contest?" "Yeah, between now and the contest," groaned Linda Catlin.

"It's that you're trying to be perfect in whatever you do," explained Patt Kemp. "Like for cake-baking, I was up all night." Saturday the 17 were trying to be perfect in the culture contest. "Who is a Victorian author?" questioned one contestant anxiously as she emerged from the literature interview. "Hardy, Dickens," offered another.

"Oh, no," she wailed. "I said Shakespeare."

"I said Francis Scott Key wrote marches."

"I've never been to an opera; how could I tell them which was my favorite opera?"

The student body will get a glimpse of what it is like to be a finalist—and who the finalists are.

Thursday, when the Intercollegiate Knights and Y Calcaries, sponsors of the contest, present a special forum assembly, "You Really Are a Queen." Student body voting will be Thursday and Friday.

The public is invited to the talent contest tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center East Ballroom.

Monday Blues

From the "Y News" of 1937: "A university bacteriologist today cited the consistent outbreak of Monday colds as proof of collegians disdain from the warning that kissing is dangerous and spreads disease."

Attributing it to weekend overindulgence, Dr. Adolf J. North of Washington State college observed, "Almost always there is an increase in colds and influenza cases on Monday mornings indicating students do not make use of the hygienic knowledge available to them."

On Saturday, the 7th Ward, led by the scoring and defensive play of Layne Whittaker, raced to a 73-63 win over BYU 70th ward to capture the M-Men Basketball championship of the BYU Zone Friday night.

Both the 70th and 70th wards, along with the 48th ward, who won third place honors by defeating the 19th, will go to the All-Church Tournament in Salt Lake beginning March 9.

Hot-shooting Ron Carling, led all scorers for the night with 23 points and was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, gave the 70th a 10-7 lead early in the game, but the 79th came back on the shooting of K.C. Anderson to take a 19-18 first quarter lead.

By winning the battle of the boards and getting a couple of key fast break baskets the 79th upped its lead to 37-29 by half time.

For all practical purposes, that was the ball game as the two teams matched point for point in the third quarter, with the 79th holding its eight-point lead at 51-43.

Carling tried to bring his 70th son back for the win in the final stanza, but he rammed in nine of his 23 markers, but it proved to be of no avail as

GOOD DANCE

Editor: Last Friday evening I attended the Jazz Concert and dance in the Wilkinson Center Ballroom. The concert was very impressive. The band did an excellent job of performing; their choice of music was also fantastic. I'm sure the students who were there were pleasantly surprised at the quality of entertainment.

I also recorded if the Belle of the Y eyes were to be tagged things, but she came from happier things. The 1958 Belle was a Miss Nevada, but she claimed that her YU title was "a bigger honor to me than any other contest which I have been in." In 1961, not one,

With the floor cleared of chairs, the jazz ensemble came back with music I hadn't heard since the "Pacemakers" of those days ago. They had a beat, the beat was beautiful and most of all, you could actually dance to it! I was amazed that they were actually performing jazz music. There were people who not only were playing by university standards, but also by Church standards that the First Presidency has set. Let me assure you here that the music wasn't "weird sounding" like most of the "conventional" group again I was pleasantly surprised.

Since it naturally got me moving in Monday's THE DAILY UNIVERSE I would like to let the other students somebody could see that they are appreciated. The band director must be with student support we could bring this musicistry back to BYU. Personally, I'm thrilled with the idea, and hope the many others are too? They have my support all the way!

season Wednesday night at home against Utah State.

The NCA-Around Argus are 19-10 following a 104-92 loss to New Mexico State in Las Cruces Saturday.

BYU's record fell to 4-10 in the Western Athletic Conference overall, and 8-17 as turnovers and cold shooting in a protest-delayed game gave New Mexico chance after chance to maintain the lead.

The Cougars led 6-5, when suddenly a consistent offense was nowhere to be found and the Lobos forged to an 18-4 run within six minutes of the first half.

New Mexico is now 6-7 in the WAC and 12-13 overall with a chance for a 500 season if the Lobos can beat WAC champion Texas El Paso in Albuquerque Wednesday.

Despite its poor play, BYU was down only 38-30 at the half. The lead was cut to 40-36 early in the second half. After a UNM timeout Howie Grimes and Willie Long then took charge and with 11:17 remaining the Lobos were out in front, 56-42.

A couple of free throws by Larry DelaTrite made it 61-59, which was as close as the Cougars could get.

Jim Miller and Paul Ruffner joined the Cougar attack with 15 points. Phil Tollstrup and Doug Howard added 12 each while DeLaTrite, who replaced Steve Kelly midway through the first half, netted eight.

Willie Long's 22 points gives him 598 for the season which breaks Mel Daniels' record of 581 for the most points by a New Mexico player in a season.

BYU Game With Lobo

north end was removed in the process.

Had another barrage of balloons been hurled the game would have been forfeited by UNM to the Cougars.

About 8:40 p.m., state troopers moved up into the group of protesters and while the crowd's attention was focused on them, the referees and teams hurried out onto the floor without the starting lineups being introduced. Thus the game got underway almost 40 minutes late.

With less than a minute gone another egg was thrown with more boozing from the crowd against the protesters. The game continued without further incident. A large number of police were ready in case of trouble, but did not try to remove any protesters.

Some 16 uniformed policemen and at least half a dozen police in civilian clothes sat among the protesters during the game, with some fans don't give them a hard time for the poor record. They really gone through a lot season.

For BYU the effect disastrous. The Cougars only five of their first 20 and had 17 turnovers. In addition to being upset about a protest disturbance, the Cougars may have been trying too hard to please a predominantly south crowd.

Whatever the psychob factors may have been, it was the Cougars' night. Fast passes were over-thrown fumbled and shots were again again erratic.

Last Road Game

The last road game is finally with BYU having literally thousands of friends that doesn't help the record team's disappointment.

Kers To See Plenty Of Action Area Fans Will Be Denied

By LIONEL HARRIS
University Sports Writer

The BYU volleyball team is with a great deal of talent here. Because of the lack of men and tournaments in this area, we won't have the opportunity to view our men in action.

There are two positions on a ball team, a spiker and a setter. While these may sound like uppers of dogs, one would appreciate their particular talents athletic powers if he were to see them in action.

The spiker is the most exciting position on the team and BYU has good ones. These include Jim Largey who was on the team at the Church College of Hawaii, the number three team in the nation, led by Olympic Ted Winfield, a 6'6" America high jumper, and proclaimed by the San Francisco Olympic Club (no. 2 team in the nation) as being "able to hit over any block," Bruce Barron, 6'6", a former BYU basketballer, who is picking up the game rapidly; Zeke Perry, 6'2", an extremely high jumper; and Ron Mickle, an All-American discus thrower and the best conditioned athlete on the team.

The setter in volleyball is the quarterback of the team. Just as the title indicates he is responsible for setting the ball at the net to allow the spiker to drive home the point. The two Cougar setters are Jim Lamph from Oakland, Calif., where he was an all-city football player, and Bobby Kauo from Hawaii. Kauo has a great deal of experience and is affectionately referred to by his teammates as the lazy one.

Recently the Cougar volleyball team placed third in a 10-team

The Tax People

A huge building, 12 acres to be exact, houses 4,500 workers at the new Energy Revenue Service's Western Service Center in Ogden. During the peak weeks around April 15, the center employs about 5,000.

Common mistakes made by people in this process are 1.2 out of every hundred (so far this year) failing to sign the returns, failure to submit adequate documents (2.3) and using the wrong tax schedules (2.4).

Tournament at Lake Tahoe, Calif. In that tourney they traded victories with the San Francisco Olympic Club, first winning 11-9, then bowing in by an 11-7 score.

This month will see the team in the Oxnard Tournament in California March 21. The Far Western Tournament in San Francisco will be their destination April 11. May 6-9 the Cougars will be in Honolulu for the United States Volleyball Association Championships.

Grapplers Split In Weekend Action

By R.C. ROBERG and BOB HUDSON

BYU's wrestling team utilized an aggressive and spirited attack Friday evening to defeat the University of New Mexico grappers 27-13, then battled a tough Portland State team on even terms throughout the evening before falling, 17-15. The two decisions bring Coach Fred Davis' team to a 6-7-1 dual meet record for the year.

Friday evening the Cougars won six consecutive matches before UNM's Rick Ortega defeated Larry Newman by a technical scrappy decision. Carl Grappler sustained an injury which will keep him for the remainder of the season and was unable to continue in his match.

The match looked like a runaway for the Davis men before Newman's injury, then the Lobos rallied to win three of the final four matches. The only fall of the evening came in the 190-lb. match when New Mexico's Bruce Davis pinned Ron Tree at the 6:00 mark.

Saturday evening the Cougars took command of the match early, winning five of the first six matches and building up a 15-3 lead. Portland State's Vikings, perennially a wrestling power, then took over and closed the gap to 15-12 with only the heavyweight contest remaining. A decision was needed for a tie and a pin for a victory. Wayne Karnes had a rough match with BYU's Ken Tams, finally pinning him with 1:58 remaining in the contest.

Coach Davis was pleased with Friday night's overall performance but was saddened by the loss of Newman commenting, "He was a game competitor and a real hustler."

Of Saturday's match he said, "We were real pleased with our boys' efforts. The boys in the lower weights did an outstanding job. We thought we had the match won but Tams was beaten by a fluke move. He was the aggressor the time and then this fluke happened."

Portland State was ranked number one in the small college division in the latest edition of the "AMATEUR WRESTLING NEWS" so the Cougars can be proud of their showing in spite of the loss.

The next action for the Davismen will be the WAC Championships in Fort Collins March 13 and 14. A dual contest with Utah which had been rescheduled twice has finally been dropped, so there will be no more dual competition this season.

Netters End Tour On Winning Note
